

Dalia KAISARLY
BDS, MDS, PhD
Department of Restorative Dentistry,
Periodontics and Pedodontics
Ludwig Maximilian University of Munich
Munich, Germany

Dalia Kaisarly has obtained her bachelor degree in dentistry (2001) and her master's degree in dental materials from the Faculty of Oral and Dental Medicine, Cairo University, Egypt. She received her doctor's degree (Dr. med. dent.) from the Ludwig Maximilian University of Munich (LMU Munich), Germany in 2014 and since then she has been a post-doc research fellow at the LMU Munich. Dr. Kaisarly has published 13 peer reviewed research and review articles in international scientific journals and has been cited 100 times, with an H-index of 5.

She has received a travel grant from the Cairo University to attend the IADR in Miami, US, in 2009 and was awarded the Best Master's Thesis of the year 2009, Cairo University, and the Assistant Lecturer of the Year, by the Cairo University Staff Members's Association (2009). Moreover, she has received the Travel Grant to the CED-IADR 2013, Florence, Italy, from the Graduate Center of the LMU Munich and three scholarships and associated travel grants from the Forschungsgemeinschaft Dental e.V. Cologne, Germany that supported her research and travel to international dental conferences.

Research interests: (1) dental resin composites; (2) dental adhesives; (3) dental ceramics; (4) various aspects of the polymerization shrinkage of composites; (5) polymerization shrinkage stresses of composites; (6) margin analysis of composite restorations; (7) clinically relevant aspects of polymerization shrinkage of composite restorations.