

Mei-Qing WANG

DDS, PhD, Professor and Head
Department of Oral Anatomy and Physiology
School of Stomatology
Air Force Medical University (AFMU)
Xi'an, Shaanxi, 710032, P.R.China

Dr. Mei-Qing Wang is the Chief Professor in Department Oral Anatomy and Physiology and TMJ, School of Stomatology, Air Force Medical University (AFMU), Xi'an, Shaanxi, 710032, P.R.China. She is an occlusionist and specialist in temporomandibular disorders (TMD). She treats over 30 TMD patients per week from 1997. She has published more than 200 papers, including over 40 English papers to expression her scientific view point that occlusion takes a role in TMD.

She has also edited and published 4 books in Chinese on Oral Anatomy and Physiology and Occlusion. She has supervised more than 50 postgraduate students. She has won the awards of Education Progress in Military (1997), the Science and Technology Progress in Military (Second Class, 2003) and in Shanxi Province (First Class, 2005).

She was honored as the Excellent Teacher of Chinese Military Schools (1998, 2006 and 2010). She is now the vice president of the Society of TMD and Occlusion and the president of Occlusion Branch, Chinese Stomatological Association (CSA). She is now the editorial board member of J Bone Mineral Res, J Oral Rehabil and CRANIO.

Research interests: oral anatomy, oral physiology, oral diseases, periodontics and oral pathology, occlusion, temporomandibular disorders, chondrocytes.